AOH Cup

The AOH Cup was presented to the Cork AUL by the Ancient Order of Hibernians in 1951 and little did the donors realise that their generosity would result in the establishment of the most famous domestic competition in junior soccer. The arrival of the AOH Cup meant that the City Challenge Cup as an AUL competition (revived again at a later date) as the increase in fixtures was not possible to accommodate. Crosshaven and Abbey Rover reached the first final of this magical competition with Crosshaven emerging as the first winners, beating Abbey Rovers by three goals to one in the final in Turners Cross. Wembley were the dominant team in the early years winning the competition three times in the first six seasons. The competition was to be dominated by St. Mary's and Castleview, who went on to appear in a record number of finals between them before they transferred to the MSL.
